

Harvest Opportunity in Agribusiness

MOO

VanEck Agribusiness ETF

Invest in the companies seeking to more efficiently feed a rapidly growing global population with evolving consumer preferences. The VanEck Agribusiness ETF (MOO) offers investors comprehensive agriculture exposure, providing access to companies that operate in the agriculture sector, including farm equipment, seed and fertilizer, and animal health.

Declining Farmland Means Less Resources to Feed More

Global Population Growth is Driving the Need for Innovation

The United Nations (UN) expects the global population to increase by 25% from 7.8 billion today to nearly 10 billion by the year 2050.¹ Aside from mounting global population, shifts in consumer preferences and a growing middle class are also demand drivers. The UN estimates that it may take as much as 70% more food production to feed this larger and wealthier population in the coming decades.¹

This growth in population and shifting consumer preferences paired with declining useable farmland has potential to drive long-term value for agribusiness companies.

Why MOO?

- Positioned to Meet Growing Demand
 Global population growth is driving increasing food demand and the need for efficient agricultural solutions
- Pure Play with Global Scope
 Companies must derive at least 50% of total revenues from agribusiness to be added to the MVIS Global Agribusiness Index
- Comprehensive Exposure
 Index targets companies across the agribusiness industry from seeds and fertilizers to farming equipment and food producers
